

QuickBooks Online powers the backbone of an eight-company portfolio at Mix Tape Ventures

Joiiin extends the platform with instant reporting intelligence across every entity

Customer challenge: consolidating financials across eight QuickBooks Online businesses

Mix Tape Ventures is a shared services company in Atlanta, GA, that owns and operates a portfolio of small businesses across industries, from restaurants to manufacturing to digital services. CEO Dave Brautigam and his team handle sales strategy, marketing, and accounting for every company in the group, each one running on a QuickBooks Online account.

As the portfolio grew, so did the complexity. Each business kept its own chart of accounts, and nothing lined up across entities. Any change to an account could throw off the entire consolidation process, sending the team back to square one.

Their workaround was particularly painful: downloading reports from each QuickBooks Online dashboard, pasting into spreadsheets, and reconciling by hand. Getting a clear financial picture took hours, or sometimes an entire day.

“As I’d get close to that quarterly report, it was like, ‘oh no, I have to put all these spreadsheets together again and ask my controller to do it.’ And then that person goes to the CFO, and we’ve got all these people involved. It was just... here we go again.”

— Dave Brautigam, CEO and Co-founder, Mix Tape Ventures

Results at a glance

Where Dave Brautigam’s team once dreaded quarterly reporting, they are now able to review financials weekly.

Consolidated reports that took a full day to assemble are generated in minutes.

The team has moved from evaluating one potential acquisition at a time to three simultaneously, with the financial visibility to assess each one confidently.

Financial visibility, every day, across every entity

The solution: one dashboard per business, one view across all eight

With every QuickBooks Online account connected through Joiin, Brautigan's team now reviews performance weekly across all eight businesses.

Each operating partner gets a reporting view built for their company: revenue and margin for the restaurant, inventory and cash for the manufacturing business, profitability and working capital across the portfolio. Dave calls his combined view "the mega sheet," a single dashboard that puts P&L, balance sheet, and cash flow side-by-side.

Faster access to financial insight helps Brautigan and his team

- Identify trends and compare performance across industries
- Spot operational challenges earlier
- Act on challenges before they compound

“When the financial house is clean, it's much easier to see where you're going—and keep it that way.”

— Dave Brautigan,
Mix Tape Ventures

“Each of our businesses runs its own version of QuickBooks, from the base model to more advanced setups with inventory and payroll.”

“Before, we were spending hours pasting spreadsheets together just to see how we were doing as a group. Now our team can focus on real work. Our mission is inspiring purpose-driven leaders to uplift their community, and that starts with giving our own people the right tools.”

— Dave Brautigan, Mix Tape Ventures

Supporting faster growth

Mix Tape Ventures now evaluates three potential acquisitions simultaneously, up from one. With the full portfolio consolidated through Joiin, Brautigan's team can assess each opportunity confidently without waiting for a manual reporting cycle to catch up.

That freed capacity shows up elsewhere too. The company has landed on the Inc. 5000 list and won multiple best-place-to-work awards, which Brautigan ties directly to his team doing strategic work instead of assembling spreadsheets.

He has since become an advocate for the solution, recommending Joiin to fellow entrepreneurs and encouraging a private equity firm that acquired one of his former businesses to adopt Joiin for franchise-level reporting. For a company whose mission is uplifting the people and communities it serves, pointing other business owners toward better tools is a natural extension.
